

a room for the view

The upstairs level is for grand children (and anyone else who is fit enough to ascend), the ground floor's for the owners (and whoever else they chose to share it with)...

'a room for the view' intends to bring generations together by providing a 'cool' place for the young and an ideal cabin facility for the owners. Both generations (and visitors) can control the amount of time they spend together and hopefully get new perspectives on one another and their surroundings through observation.

The roof slope is based on James Turrell's 'Stroom' in the Hague.
